Rousseau-Grinnell.

What we have to say of the Rousseau-Grinnell affair is this:—Mr. Grinnell's assault upon General Rousseau as a soldier was grossly unjust. The writer of this was in action with General Rousseau, and we bear cheerful testimony to his splendid gallantry. He commanded the reserves at Stone river, but was brought into action early on that terrible morning. It was our privilege to meet General Rousseau in the hottest part of the field. The glow of hattle was in his countenance, and in his presence there was a martial fire and enthusiasm that excited every man of soldierly spirit who saw him into a glow of heroism. As he rede along his line, upon his splendid chestnut, waving his hat, his troops falling almost by platoons, the fighting men set up a shout that fairly silenced the rattle of musketry and roar of cannen.
